Automated trading is the name of the game now. Every few days, you will find a new forex robot being launched with the developer claiming to have already made a fortune with that robot. So now you can find many good fx robots in the market. The problem with the brokers continues. Most of the brokers use unethical practices in making these robots fail.

A few days back, one of the readers left a comment on my blog about the forex trading scalper that he was forced to close the trade manually as it was not closing the trade. Now, this problem can be due to using unoptimized settings or it can be due to the broker.

If you are using a narrow slippage setting like 3-4 pips than the robot will get a requote error due to which it may not automatically close the trade. If this is so you should test with a wider slippage settings. Now, always remember, you win, you broker loses and if you lose your broker wins. Trading is a zero sum game. So if you win, it has to be your broker on the other losing side.

What this means is that your broker will use all sorts of tricks to make you trip and lose. FAP Turbo was a very successful robot when it was launched. It was consistently doubling the capital. The brokers suddenly started widening the spreads when it would trade. Thus forcing it to lose the trade.

In the same manner, you may find mysterious disconnections when trading. If you ask the broker, he will blame the internet connection. Especially if you are trading a larger lot be careful. The best way is to trade a mini lot when using a forex robot in the beginning. Sometimes, the brokers will give error messages like misquotes and requotes. Whatever, there are many tricks the broker can use to make your forex robot lose a trade.

Then, many fx robots are scams. Many developers don't know anything about forex trading. They copy and steal others code or just use the free code that is available online, rename it and start marketing it as a new fx robot. Now, trading with such a robot is of course a waste of time. What you need to learn is to spot these scam robot at the very start so that you don't waste time with them.
